What Is Bail Bond in Weber County?

In Weber County, a bail bond is basically a binding agreement between the defendant, their consignee, and bailing party. In case the accused party is unable to raise the bail amount set by the court, then our bail company at Bad boys Bail Bonds will come in as a guarantor between the accused party and the court. The primary purpose of the bond is to offer an assurance to the court that upon release, the defendant will still honor all court dates.

Here are some of the common types of bails bonds in Weber County and how they work.

- Surety Bond: A surety bond is usually posted on the defendant's behalf by another third party working with a Weber bail bond company. The third party offers collateral to facilitate the release of the defendant.
- Release on Your own Recognizance: In this case, the defendant is released without any payment. However, a pledge is signed in which the accused party promises to appear in court when required.
- Cash Bond: Typically, a cash bond will be set by the court if the defendant is considered a flight risk. The amount must be paid in full by either the defendant or his/her family before he/she is released. However, the amount is returned if the defendant appears in court when required.
- Citation Release: A citation release occurs when the defendant is released immediately after arrest. Citation release is frequent in cases such as traffic violations.

- Property Bond: A property bond is usually used as collateral for bail. The value of the property must be at least twice that of the bail amount.

Immigration Bond: this type of bond is usually used on illegal immigration aliens who need bail. This is the most expensive type of bail bond due to the complexity of the processes involved.

How is a Bail Bond in Weber County Determined?

After an arrest occurs, the defendant is arraigned in court for the bail hearing session. The judge listens to the argument presented by the accused party and sets an appropriate amount of bail based on the severity of the alleged crime and other factors such as the risk the defendant poses to other people or themselves. The bail amount can be as low as $100 or hundreds of thousands of U.S dollars.

To get out of jail, the defendant must post the bail. Sometimes, bail amounts can high and paying the full price may not be possible. That is when a bail bond company such as Bad Boys Bail Bonds comes in to help you. Our bail bond company pays the bail amount to the court, and it still becomes liable if the accused party fails to appear in court on the specified date.
